

Chechera and Chernogryazka. At this point, two underground rivers merge into one and then flows into the Yauza.

Wall paintings made using electric grinders and paints depict scenes from Egyptian mythology. In this case, Anubis smuggles the soul of a dead man across the river of the dead to Duat.

You never know where this or that hatch can lead you.

The main objects that can be seen in river tunnels are metal fragments that form certain clusters at the bottom or walls of the reservoir.

Surely many years ago this was a grate for garbage screening.

One of the first sketches of an unknown artist. It is possible to notice that in some places he tested
the capabilities of his tool.

It seems that this square vertical tunnel was used to dispose of excess snow in the river.

This place is a part of Chernogaska river and it is located underground between the railway and Zemlyanoy Val street. There is a noticeable height difference. The tunnel repeats this elevation.

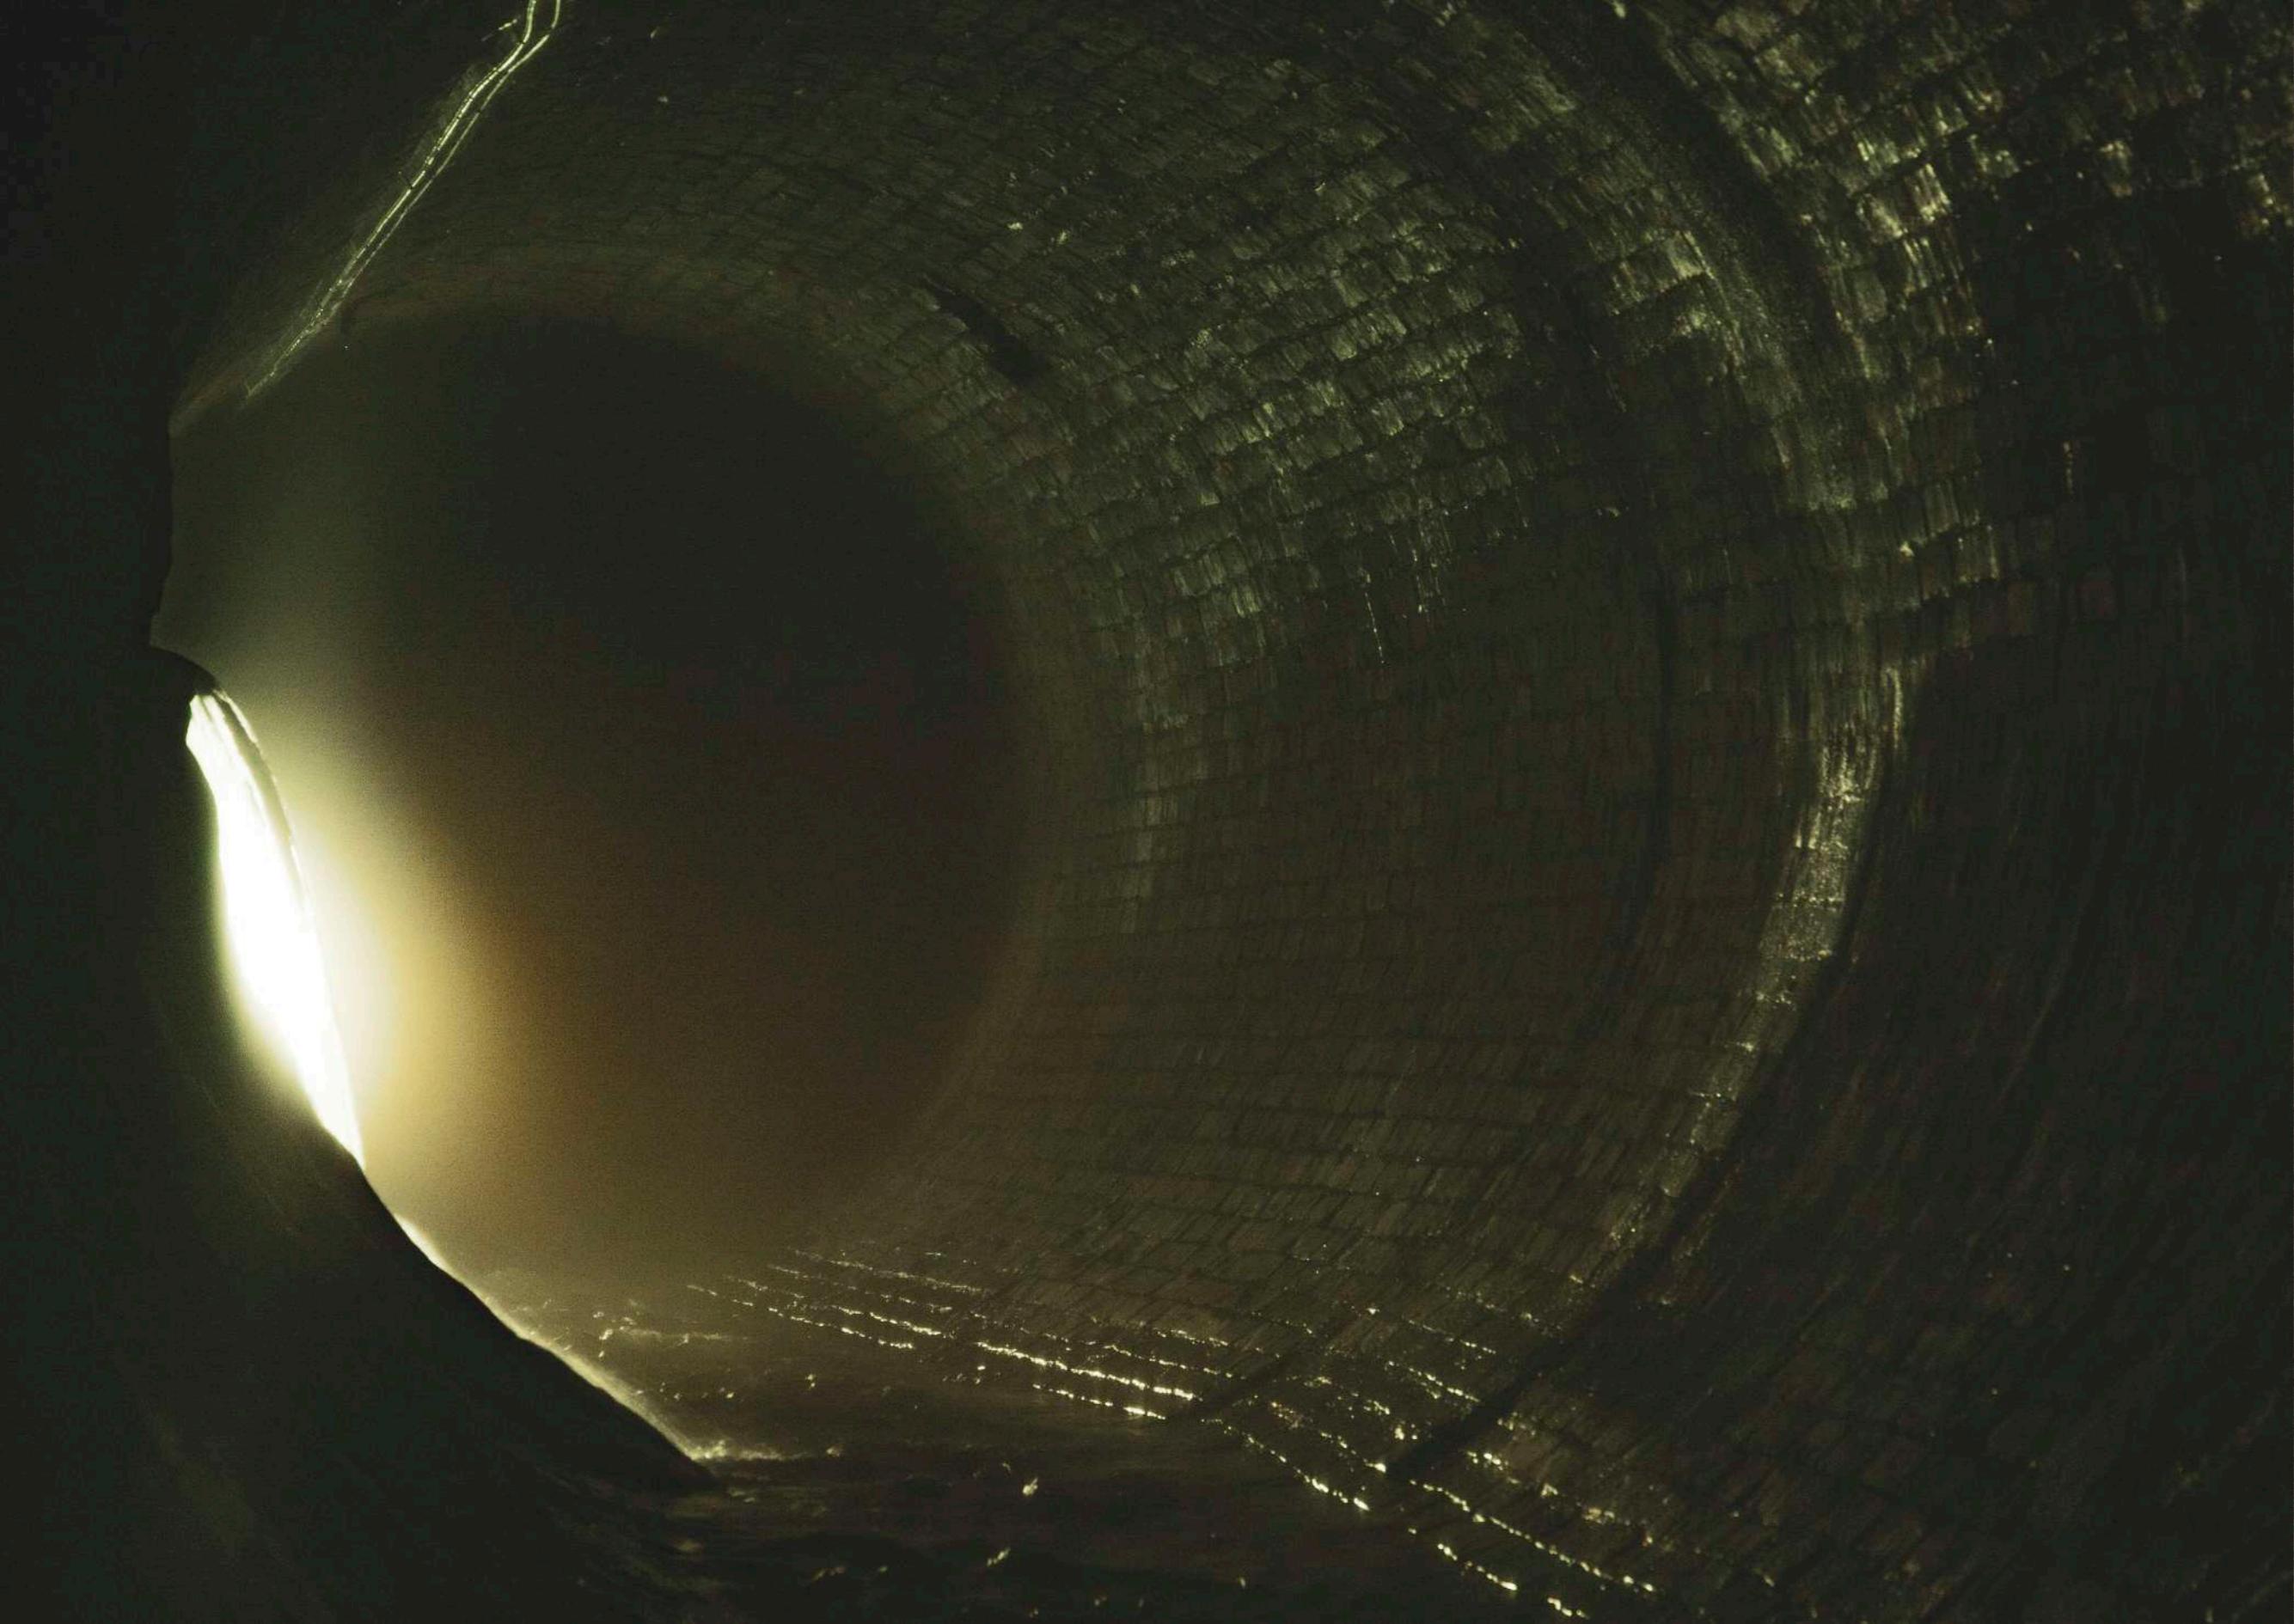

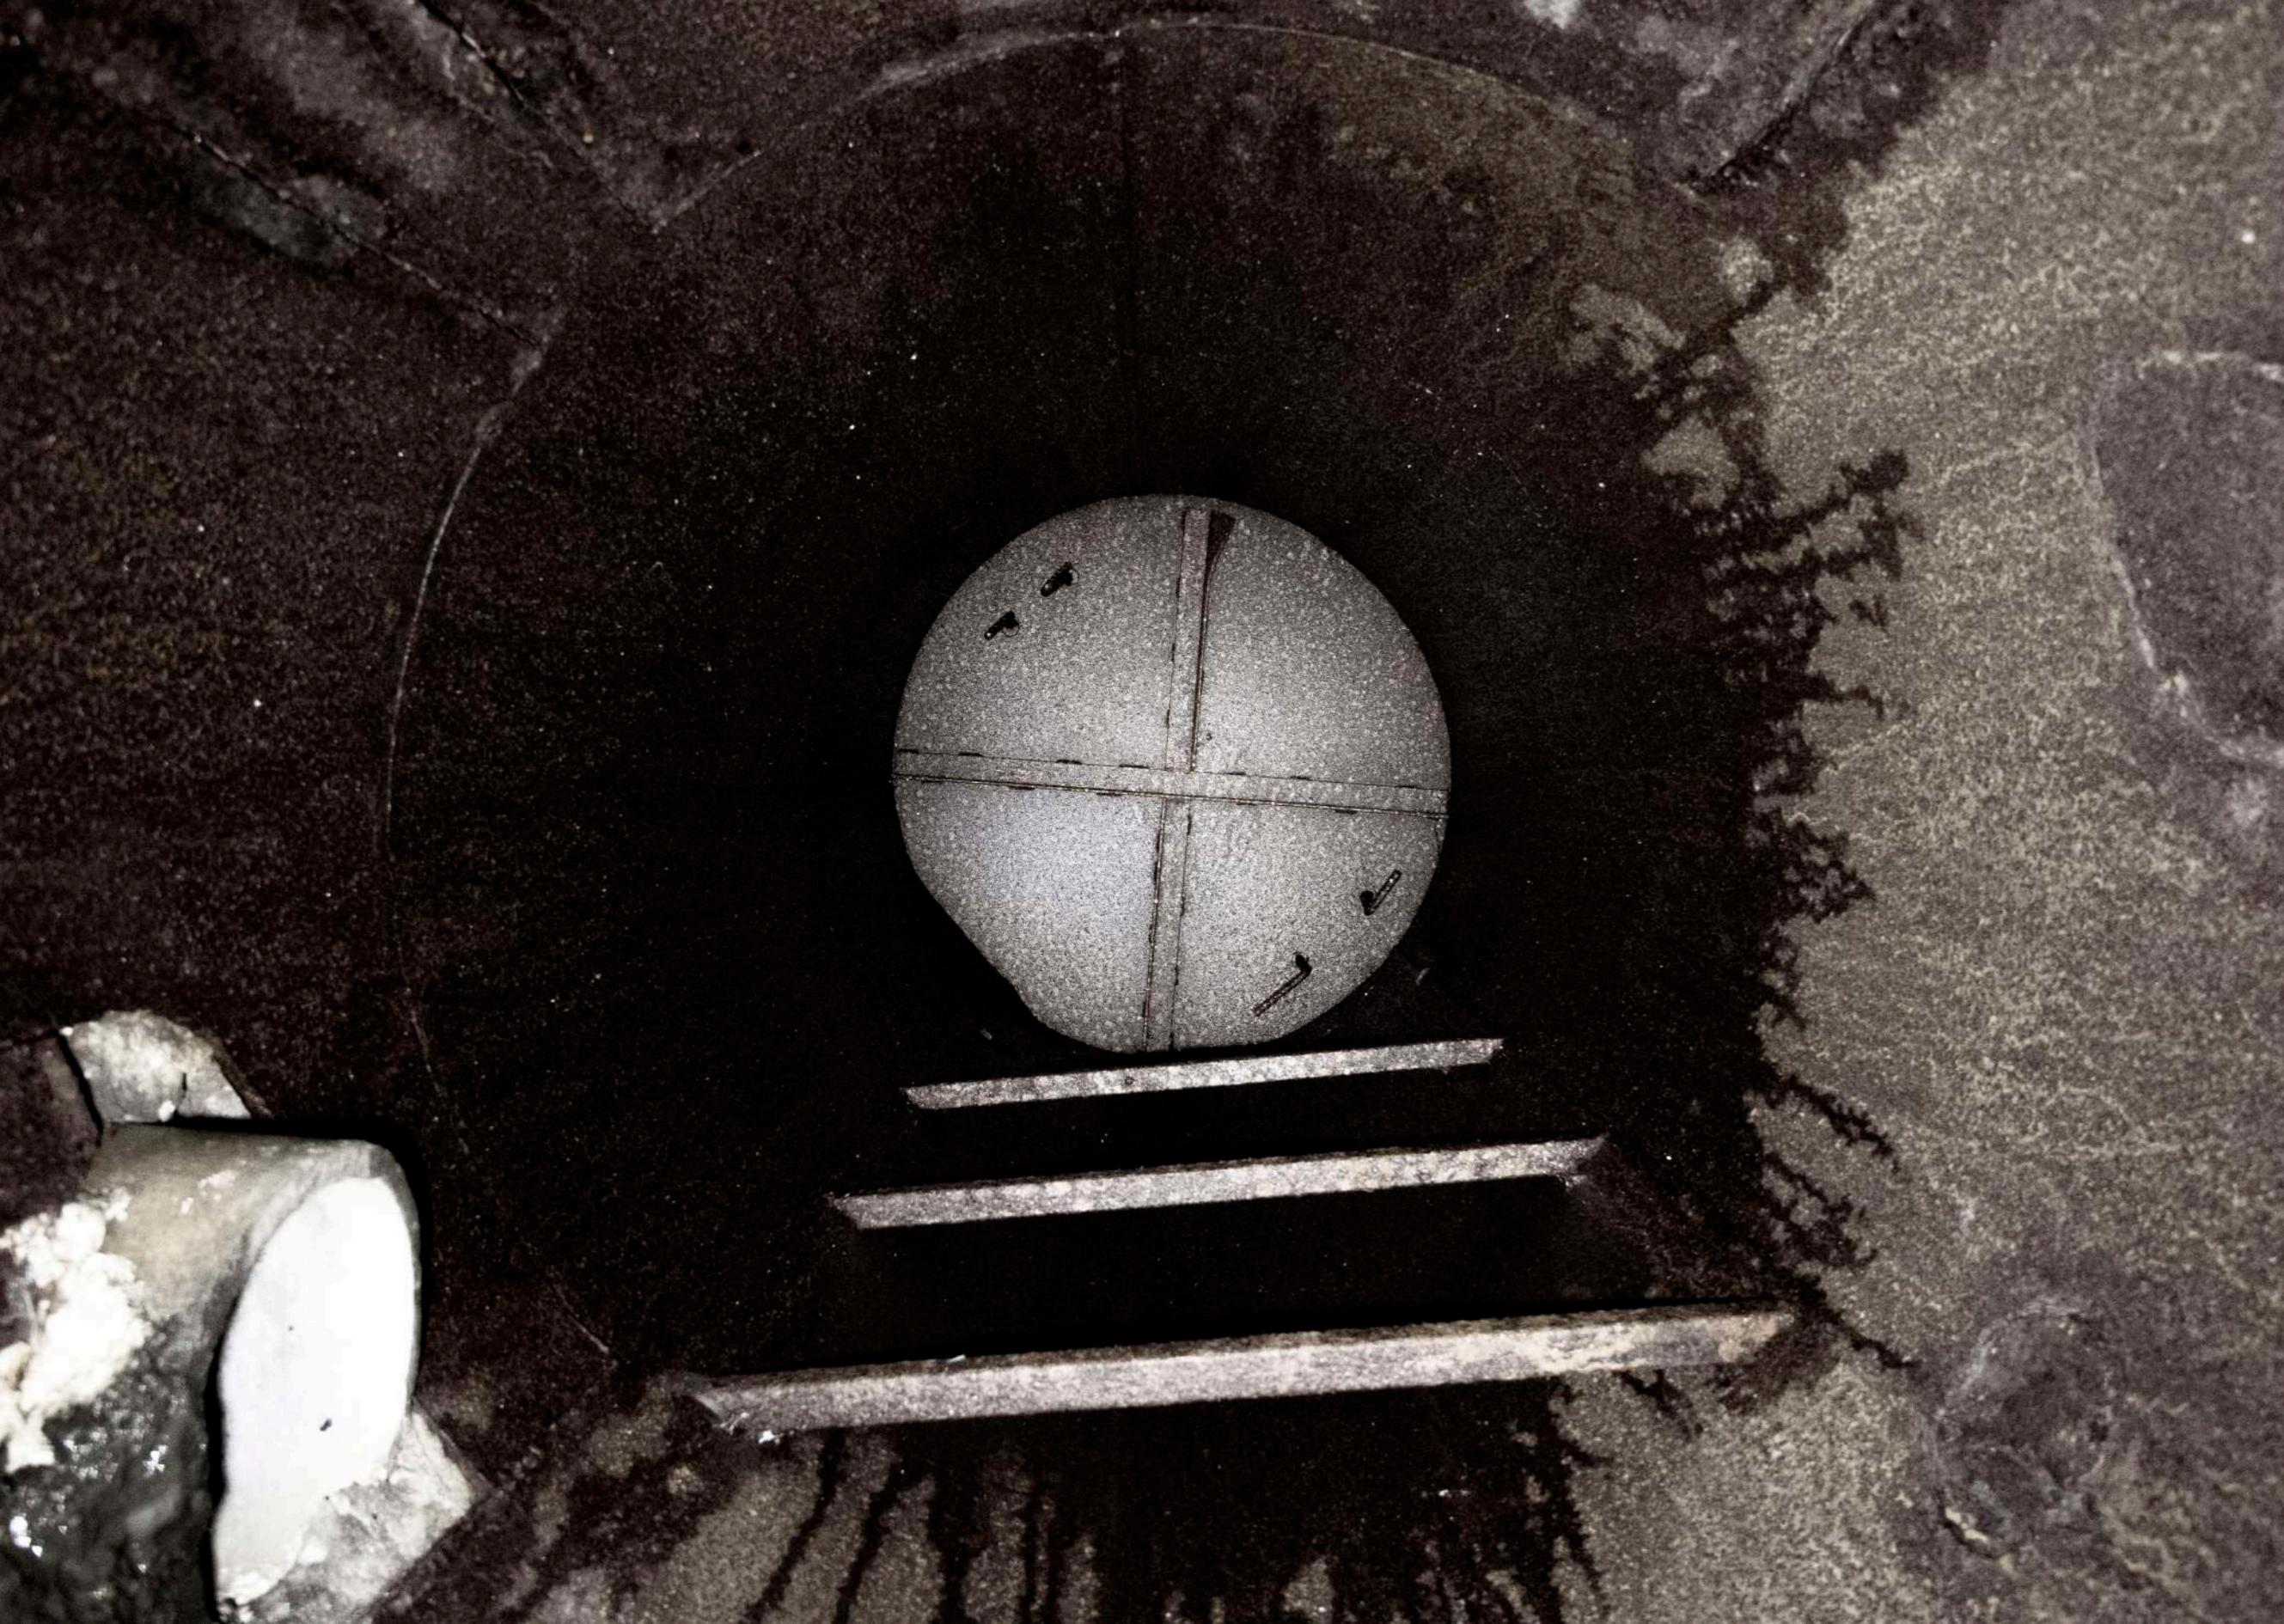

Most Chechera hatches and drain grills go directly to the roadway, very often this can be a problem for exhausted diggers.

In the zone of brick tunnels, there is a place where a strong stream of water beats from the wall. It never ceases. For many years, a limestone growth has formed there.

The roots of various plants can enter the tunnel through bricks.

This is the last hatch in Chechera,
it has not been opened for a very long time.

At this stage there is a fork. As a rule, exhausted travelers go along an older branch, so no one knows where the newer tunnel leads to.

The mycelium network penetrates the ground through the hatch.

The place where Chechera (right)
flows separately from the Alkhovets river.

Named brick. As a rule, they indicate the initials of the heads of the brick factory.

This is one of the working and usable hatches. It goes right between two railway tracks at the Kazansky station.

At this stage there is a fork. As a rule, exhausted travelers go along an older branch, so no one knows where the newer tunnel leads to.

Apparently, some adventurers tried to go down the tunnel through the rope.

